Acknowledgments

The author would like to thank his supervisors, Professor Francesco Romeo and Professor Paul De Hert for their time, patience and wisdom during the last years. In addition to the direct help they provided towards the thesis itself, I would like to thank them for the stable research environment both helped provide for me during the years it took me to write it. Similar thanks go to Professor Steven J. Brams, Professor Carrie Menkel-Meadow and Professor Ronald P. Loui for their support.

I would also like to thank my jury members (Professor Matteo Winkler, Professor Stefano Moretti, Professor Francesco Gambino and Professor Gloria Gonzalez-Fuster) for their frank yet constructive advice on the improvement of this thesis.

Closer to home I would like to thank my sister Paola and my parents for their unending patience and their many years of support. Without their fortitude and support (which I no doubt took for granted all too often) nothing would have been possible. Furthermore, I would like to thank my friends Carmen and Olivier, for their help in proof reading the final copy of this document and everyone who has stood by me during these three years.
